

Congress of the United States
Washington, DC 20515

September 15, 2011

The Honorable Ruth Goldway
Chairwoman
Postal Regulatory Commission
901 New York Avenue NW
Suite 200
Washington, DC 20268

Dear Chairwoman Goldway,

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the U.S. Postal Service's proposal to close up to 3,653 post offices. We would appreciate your inclusion of this letter in your formal record of comment. We appreciate the dire fiscal condition of the Postal Service and the need to change the Postal Service's business model to protect its viability and the service it provides to American consumers and businesses. Unfortunately, widespread post office closures are the wrong way to deal with the Postal Service's fiscal problems, and they could harm the Postal Service's competitiveness in the long run.

The Postal Service's unparalleled retail network actually is a competitive advantage, as several business representatives noted at a joint House/Senate hearing on the Postal Service. This expansive retail network provides several vital services:

- It fulfills the Postal Service's universal service obligation, providing connections for rural communities which would otherwise be isolated.
- It creates business opportunities for private mail delivery services, which rely on the Postal Service for the last mile of delivery in most parts of America.
- It creates business opportunities for small businesses and online entrepreneurs which deliver their products through the mail, because no other delivery service provides low cost deliveries like the Postal Service.
- It creates business opportunities for the $1 trillion mailing industry, which includes suppliers, retailers, advertisers, and packagers.
- It protects the health of seniors by ensuring reliable delivery of prescription drugs through the mail.

The law requires that "the Postal Service shall provide a maximum degree of effective and regular postal services to rural areas." (39 U.S.C. 101(b)). However, the USPS is centering its downsizing efforts on small post offices (its Postal Regulatory Commission filing lists 2,825 post offices that earn less than $27,000 per year). These low-earning post offices tend to be located in rural areas. A reduction of this size would have a severe negative impact on rural America, threatening the viability of thousands of small towns across America. Village Post Offices will not fill this void and do not offer all regular postal services, thus, failing to provide the maximum degree of effective service.

Underlying this post office closure proposal is the premise that drastic cuts in costs are the only way to maintain the solvency of the Postal Service. This assumption is inaccurate, and once again we are presented with false choices. The Postal Service would still have positive net revenue today except for the requirement that it prefund 100% of employee retirement and retirement health costs, a requirement that Congress imposed on it in 2006. No other public or private business in America faces this onerous and unnecessary requirement, and Congress could give the Postal Service breathing room to recalibrate its business model simply by repealing this retirement prefunding requirement. So too Congress could allow the Postal Service to use some of the $50-$75 billion that Postal Service employees and customers overpaid to the Treasury during the last thirty years. Simply correcting this overpayment would do far more to protect the solvency of the Postal Service than closing small rural postal facilities. Finally, Congress should remove restrictions which prevent the Postal Service from selling products closely associated with postal products. Thanks to the 2006 Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act, the Postal Service can't even sell postal-related products and services such as wine and beer shipment. Congress should allow the Postal Service to operate like a business rather than punish rural America for the strictures that Congress placed on the Postal Service in 2006.

We greatly appreciate the PRC's careful consideration of this proposal and your longstanding efforts to understand the multifaceted benefits provided by the Postal Service. It is no less valuable today than when Pony Express riders raced across the American frontier. This Constitutional institution must be strengthened, not eviscerated, because it continues to improve quality of life for our constituents while creating more than a trillion dollars of private sector business activity. Widespread closure of post offices should be rejected in favor of more thoughtful reform that fixes the errors of the 2006 Postal Accountability and Enhancement Act and finally allows the Postal Service to behave like a business and ensures the requirement to provide universal service is fulfilled.

Sincerely,

Gerald E. Connolly
11th District, Virginia

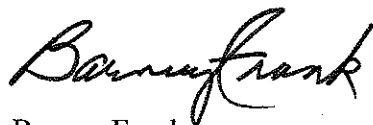

Don Young
At-Large, Alaska

Heath Shuler
11th District, North Carolina

Morgan Griffith
9th District, Virginia

Barney Frank
4th District, Massachusetts

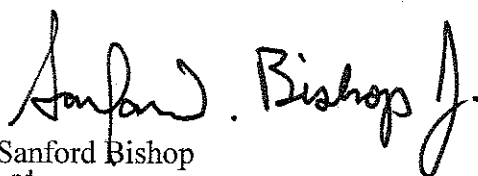

Leonard Boswell
3rd District, Iowa

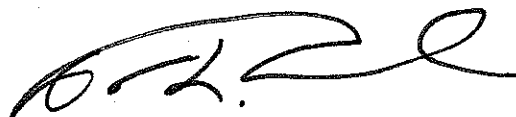

Earl Blumenauer
3rd District, Oregon

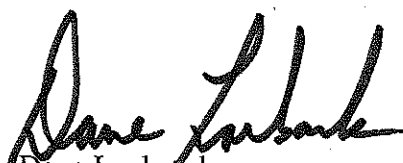

Michael Michaud
2nd District, Maine

Sanford Bishop
2nd District, Georgia

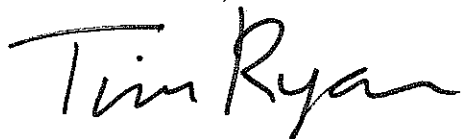

Cedric Richmond
2nd District, Louisiana

Dave Loebsack
2nd District, Iowa

Steve Rothman
9th District, New Jersey

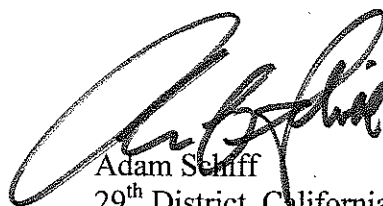

Tim Ryan
17th District, Ohio

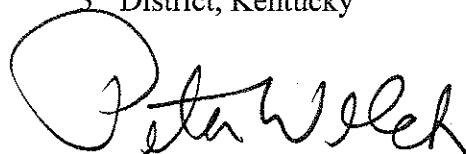

Gene Green
29th District, Texas

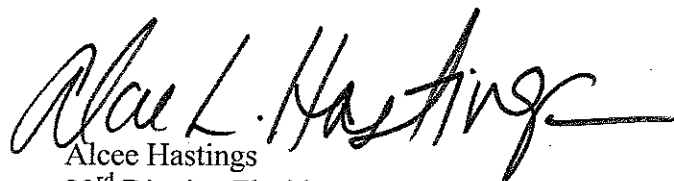

John Yarmuth
3rd District, Kentucky

Adam Schiff
29th District, California

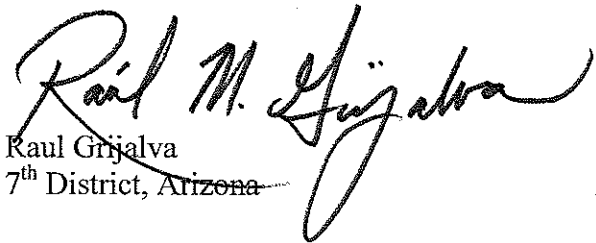

Peter Welch
At-Large, Vermont

Alcee Hastings
23rd District, Florida

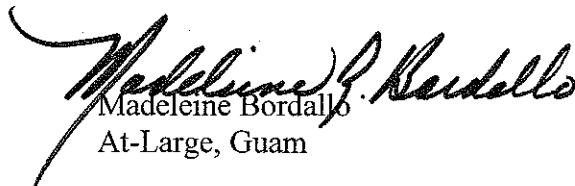

Steve LaTourette
14th District, Ohio

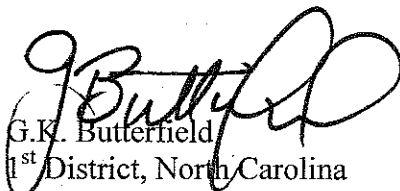

Raul Grijalva
7th District, Arizona

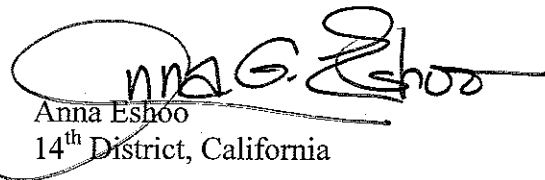

Gwen Moore
4th District, Wisconsin

Madeleine Bordallo
At-Large, Guam

G.K. Butterfield
1st District, North Carolina

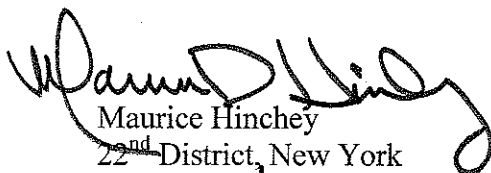

Anna Eshoo
14th District, California

Laura Richardson
37th District, California

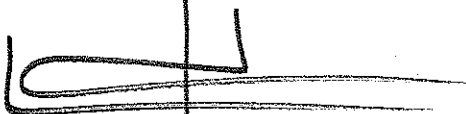

Dale Kildee
5th District, Michigan

Maurice Hinchey
22nd District, New York

Marcia Fudge
11th District, Ohio

Colleen Hanabusa
1st District, Hawaii

Paul Tonko
21st District, New York

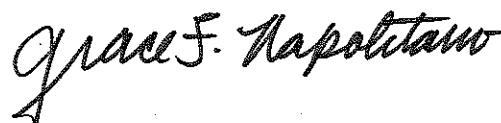

Ruben Hinojosa
15th District, Texas

Rush Holt
12th District, New Jersey

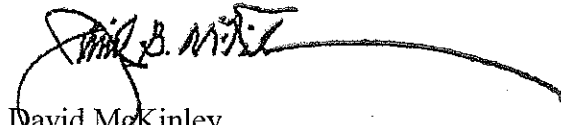

Bill Owens
23rd District, New York

Grace Napolitano
38th District, California

Gary Ackerman
5th District, New York

Russ Carnahan
3rd District, Missouri

David McKinley
1st District, West Virginia

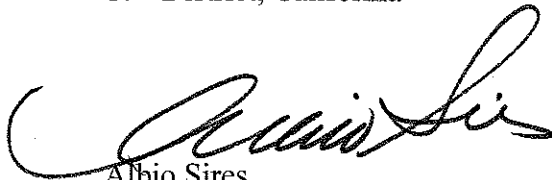

Gregorio Kilili Camacho Sablan
MP, Marianas Islands

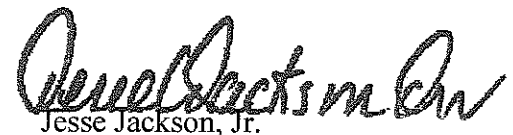

Jose Serrano
16th District, New York

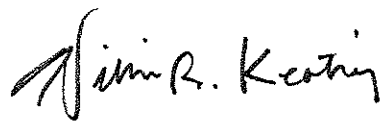

Joe Baca
43rd District, California

Sam Farr
17th District, California

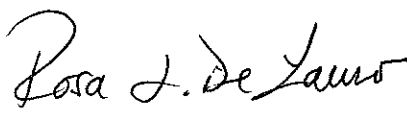

Loretta Sanchez
47th District, California

Albio Sires
13th District, New Jersey

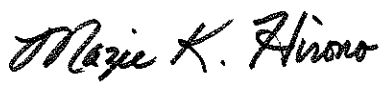

Jesse Jackson, Jr.
2nd District, Illinois

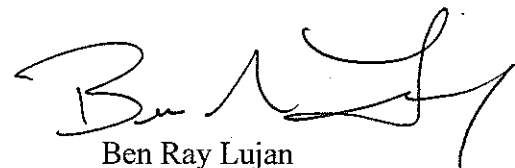

William R. Keating
10th District, Massachusetts

Bill Johnson
6th District, Ohio

Rosa DeLauro
3rd District, Connecticut

Gary Peters
9th District, Michigan

Mazie Hirono
2nd District, Hawaii

Ben Ray Lujan
3rd District, New Mexico

Bob Filner

51st District, California

Mike Doyle

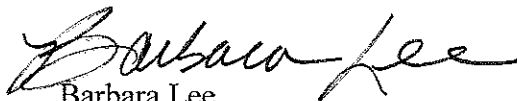

14th District, Pennsylvania

Pete Visclosky

Pete Visclosky

1st District, Indiana

Barbara Lee

Barbara Lee

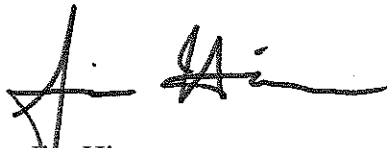

9th District, California

Mike Ross

Mike Ross

4th District, Arkansas

Jim Himes

Jim Himes

4th District, Connecticut

Tammy Baldwin

Tammy Baldwin

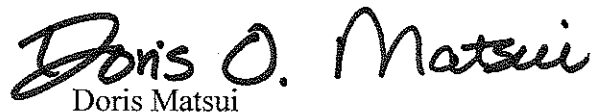

2nd District, Wisconsin

Michael Grimm

Michael Grimm

13th District, New York

Doris Matsui

Doris Matsui

5th District, California

Eleanor Holmes Norton

Eleanor Holmes Norton

At-Large, District of Columbia

Nick J. Rahall, II

Nick J. Rahall, II

3rd District, West Virginia

Mark Critz

Mark Critz

12th District, Pennsylvania

Mike Thompson

Mike Thompson

1st District, California

Jo Ann Emerson

Jo Ann Emerson

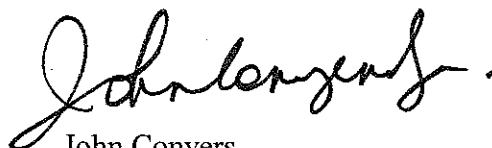

8th District, Missouri

Henry Cuellar

Henry Cuellar

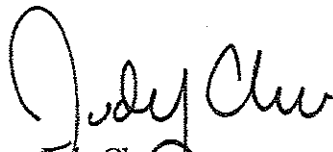

28th District, Texas

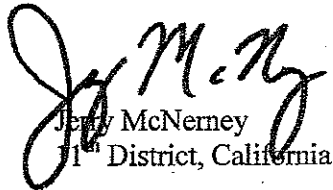

John Conyers

John Conyers

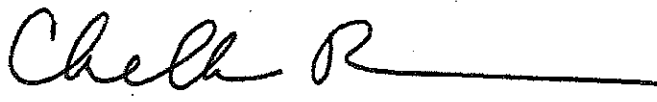

14th District, Michigan

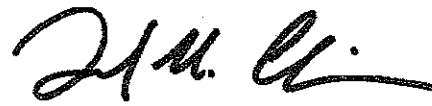

Judy Chu
32nd District, California

Lynn Woolsey
6th District, California

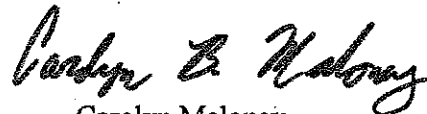

Jerry McNerney
11th District, California

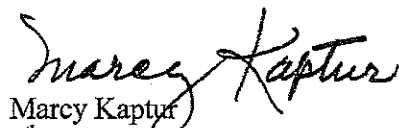

Jerrold Nadler
8th District, New York

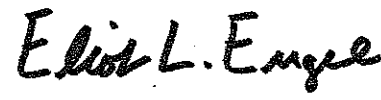

Chellie Pingree
1st District, Maine

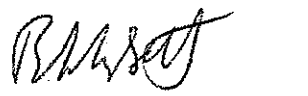

David Cicilline
1st District, Rhode Island

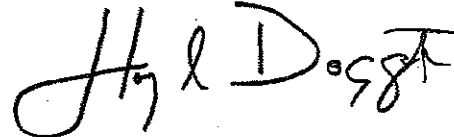

Bill Pascrell
8th District, New Jersey

Carolyn Maloney
14th District, New York

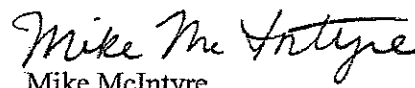

Marcy Kaptur
9th District, Ohio

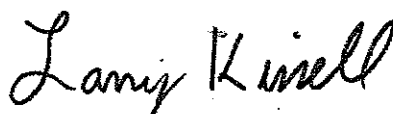

Eliot Engel
17th District, New York

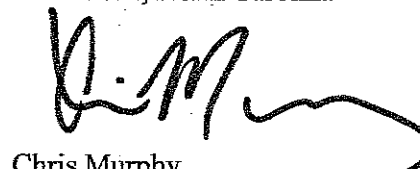

Robert C. "Bobby" Scott
3rd District, Virginia

Lloyd Doggett
25th District, Texas

Shelley Berkley
1st District, Nevada

Mike McIntyre
7th District, North Carolina

Congressman Larry Kissell
8th District, North Carolina

Chris Murphy
5th District, Connecticut